ABOUT THE SPEAKERS

Susan Mulligan is a native of Southern California with a bachelor’s degree in civil engineering from Stanford University and a master’s degree in business administration from UCLA. A registered professional engineer in the field of civil engineering and a Grade 5 Water Treatment Plant Operator, she has been general manager at Calleguas since 2010, with the goal of providing water reliability in an economically and environmentally responsible manner.

Matthew Fienup is an economist and director of CLU’s CERF, where he teaches courses in econometrics and environmental economics in the masters of quantitative economics program. Fienup holds a master’s degree in economics from the University of California Santa Barbara, and is currently finishing his PhD in environmental economics at the Bren School of Environmental Science and Management at UCSB. Fienup is active in the issues surrounding urban growth restriction and groundwater management policy in Ventura County.

Joshua Haggmark, a registered civil engineer and the water resources manager for the City of Santa Barbara, oversees both water and wastewater operations for a population of 93,000. He has been active in the management of the City’s diverse water supply portfolio, which includes the Gibraltar Dam and Reservoir, surface water from Lake Cachuma, groundwater wells, state water, groundwater banking, supplemental water purchases, recycled water, desalination, water conservation and the reactivation of the City’s Charles E. Meyer Desalination Facility.

For over 30 years, FCOP has been providing quality solutions and personal attention to clients throughout California. Conveniently located in Westlake Village and Ventura, our two full-service offices offer expert counsel across 14 specialized practice groups.
